Carol's Grandfather DeFord suggested to her that when she started school she should look for me. He thought we could be friends. I had to walk to his store and buy snuff for my Granny and I guess he thought I was a nice person. She later told me that the first day of school she was on a mission to find me. We just hit it off. We kinda lost touch for a while in the 80s. Someone told her that I had moved back to Savannah in late 1990s. One day the phone rang and it was Carol. She told me that she had been calling every Linda Taylor she could find and there were quite a few. I was so glad to have my friend again.
