“ About a year ago I started writing a poem that told of how I felt about my father, Adrian, when I was just a little kid. While writing it I realized that I have always felt this way about him.

I was honored to be with him in his last moments and so glad he didn't die alone. Just minutes before he passed, I read the poem to him which are the last words he ever heard, other than "I love you daddy".

SUPERMAN

by Wm. Mark Todd 2021

*I had a great hero in my childhood home.
He was my daddy, my mentor, I was never alone.*

*Family came first, then anyone in need.
He'd make a friend with a smile, any race, color, or creed.*

Vision or x-rays; I just don't know but he saw the tiniest of good in every body and soul.

*Phone booth for changing room would've been no surprise.
Though I never saw him leap, I did see him fly.*

*A pilot, a biker, an executive, best friend
Provider, protector, companion, till end.*

*If you're thinking pretentious or picturing facade,
you didn't know my father Adrian Otto Todd.*
