“ Danny was a very complex guy. When I first met him, we shared interests like WWE's Stone Cold Steve Austin and Star Wars. He enjoyed the movies Sling Blade and Day of the Dead. You could catch him during the day enjoying country music radio on a commute to work, and at night you can hear him blasting Everlast, Afroman, and Metallica. Great music, but sometimes too loud. More than anything he was a foodie. He loved making food. Fan favorite dishes around the house were Chicken Casserole, Chicken and Dumplings, and Cubed Steak. He also loved whipping up cornbread. We would always have some around the house.

His favorite restaurants were Long John Silver and Captain D's. He loved and always went there for a bite. He enjoyed the outdoors and was a jokester. I remember us going to an outdoor zoo and he joked that his natural habitat included a Winston, an ash tray and a cold one in hand.

To tell you he was perfect would not be fair to anyone. There were times he drove us crazy, made us sad, made us angry sometimes to a breaking point where we couldn't take it. But at his core he was a man who was striving to be better, and that's all any of us could really do.

He would pick us up when we were down, lend a helping hand with a car or a worn down desk that needed work. He rescued a good dog from euthanasia from a shelter so that he could have a second chance at life, and was once known to his coworkers as Superman. He showed us the Superman T-shirt they bought him and was very proud of it. There is a lot about him you could only know by meeting him, like his sense of humor and wit, but I hope I could just leave you with some of the positive impressions he left while here on Earth. May he rest in peace.

“ Danny was thoughtful, funny and full of personality. He made an imprint on my childhood and loved cooking and caring for others. Some of my favorite moments of Danny were when he played a wide variety of hilarious music and pantomimed it. I loved that when Danny had a conversation with you, he was fully present and into whatever he was saying with flare! Thank God for Danny and the time we had with him!
