“ My dad, not biologically, but the man that took me in as a step-daughter 30 years ago. My best friend, my mentor, my life coach and the man my girls would call their hero aka “grandca”. So many memories but what stands out the most is his strength over the past year just so he could have a few more seconds with the ones he loved. His fight was remarkable and certainly something most couldn’t do. His love is undying and his teachings are infinite. I’m certain Gods plan has been fulfilled as he gains a true Saint. He didn’t push religion on people rather he did the unthinkable..let his actions show what a Christian should act like. My heart breaks with the thought of him being gone but I am more than thankful that he is in a better place and finally out of pain and at peace. You are in the heavens now sitting back watching all of us live as you have taught us. Your mark and love is forever in our hearts and minds.

Very well said. He loved you like his own and those grand kids too. So many memores for us, funny, happy, sad, scary, etc. I will forever cherish the times with yal as most of them are unforgettable. My most proud moment is him wispering M I T in beizhs ear while she was growing up and her rememe ring and wanting to go there still to this day. He will definitely be missed. Love yal
