“ I, too, originally met Mary online. Then, when my husband and I were in TX for the winter, I met her and John several times...including for breakfast when she was down to see an Aunt. Ray and I met them again when their Mississippi River cruise stopped in Dubuque. Her paintings and knitted projects were indeed works of art. She'll be missed in our online breast cancer support group.

“ Mary & I met virtually on Senior Net--now Seniors & Friends, way back in the 90's, but we made an effort to meet her in person on our way through Chattanooga, several years ago. She was a really good artist and a lovely person. I will miss her on-line presence. My condolences to her beloved family.

“ I was so glad to get to see Aunt Mary a few years ago on a road trip through her neck of the woods. We sat outside and she shared family stories I'd never heard and I felt such a warmth and ease around her. There was the immediate comfort you feel around close family even though it had been a long long time since we'd seen each other. Thinking fondly of her and lighting a candle in her honor tonight.

“ Once when Mary new we needed pink hats for a women's march she quickly knitted and sent us pink hats. She knew that I couldn't knit and rushed to help without being asked. She was the kindest, best Aunt in the world. We haven't seen Mary in a long time as we live in Australia, but she helped us from across the world.
